

A Strange Treasure

Old John Crabtree was the owner of the biggest orchard in his part of the country. He was also the father of three strong but lazy sons. Old John looked after his fruit with very little help from his son.

Dear Me! He would say to himself. 'I wish my sons would work in the orchard. If they did, I am sure that the fruit would bring them a fortune.'

One day John fell ill and died. Not long after his death, the three sons met to hear what money their father had left to them. The reading of his will amazed them. "The orchard and the treasure which is there, I leave to my three sons."

"Treasure!" they shouted. "Isn't that wonderful!" We will be rich. Father has hidden his money in the orchard." The youngest son said, "We will dig and search in the orchard until we find it".

The sons made their plans to find the treasure. They worked as they had never worked before. After months of digging and searching, no treasure was found. For the first time that year, something happened. There was so much fruit on the trees, that the branches were bent almost to the ground. The three sons were delighted.

When harvest time came, the sons were kept busy. The youngest son picked the ripe fruit from the trees. The middle son cleaned it, and the eldest son packed it carefully into boxes. Their fruit was sold to merchants for a very good price. They soon became quite rich.

One day the eldest son said to his brothers, "Our father was a very wise man. Father knew we were very lazy, if he said there was treasure in the orchard, he knew we would dig and search for it. By our digging, we helped the trees to give us such a wonderful crop of fruit. That fruit has brought us a great deal of money and made us rich."

Sample Paper

Time: 1hr 30 minutes

Read the passage carefully. Then answer the following questions:

When I was four months old, my mother died suddenly and my father was left to look after me all by himself. I had no brothers or sisters. So all through my boyhood, from the age of four months onward, there were just the two of us, my father and me.

(paragraph 1)

We lived in old gypsy caravan behind a filling- station. My father owned the filling-station and the caravan and a small field behind but that was about all he owned in the world. It was a very small filling-station on a small country road surrounded by fields and woody hills. The filling-station itself had only two pumps. There was a wooden shed behind the pumps that served as an office. There was nothing in the office except an old table and a cash register to put money into.

(paragraph 2)

The square brick building to the right of the office was the workshop. My father built that himself with loving care, and it was the only really solid thing in place.

“We are engineers, you and I”, he used to say to me.

“We earn our living by repairing engines and we can’t do good work in a rotten workshop”.

(paragraph 3)

It was a fine workshop, big enough to take one car comfortably and leave plenty of room round the sides for working. It had a telephone so that customers could arrange to bring their cars for repair.

(paragraph 4)

The caravan was our house and home. It was a real old gypsy wagon with big wheels and fine patterns painted all over it in yellow and red and blue. There was only one room in the caravan. It was a narrow room, the shape of the caravan itself. Against the back wall were two bunk beds, one above the other, the top one was my father’s, the bottom one was mine.

Immediately behind the caravan was an old apple tree. It bore lovely apples that ripened in the middle of September and you could go on picking them for the next four or five weeks. Some of the boughs of the tree hung right over the caravan. (paragraph 5)

I really loved living in the gypsy caravan. I loved it especially in the evenings when I was tucked up in my bunk and my father was telling me stories. Most of all was the feeling that when I went to sleep, my father would still be there, very close to me, sitting in his chair by the fire, or lying in the bunk above my own. (paragraph 6)
